

Month-to-month customers show higher churn, making contract type the strongest predictor of churn.

3002
Total Customers

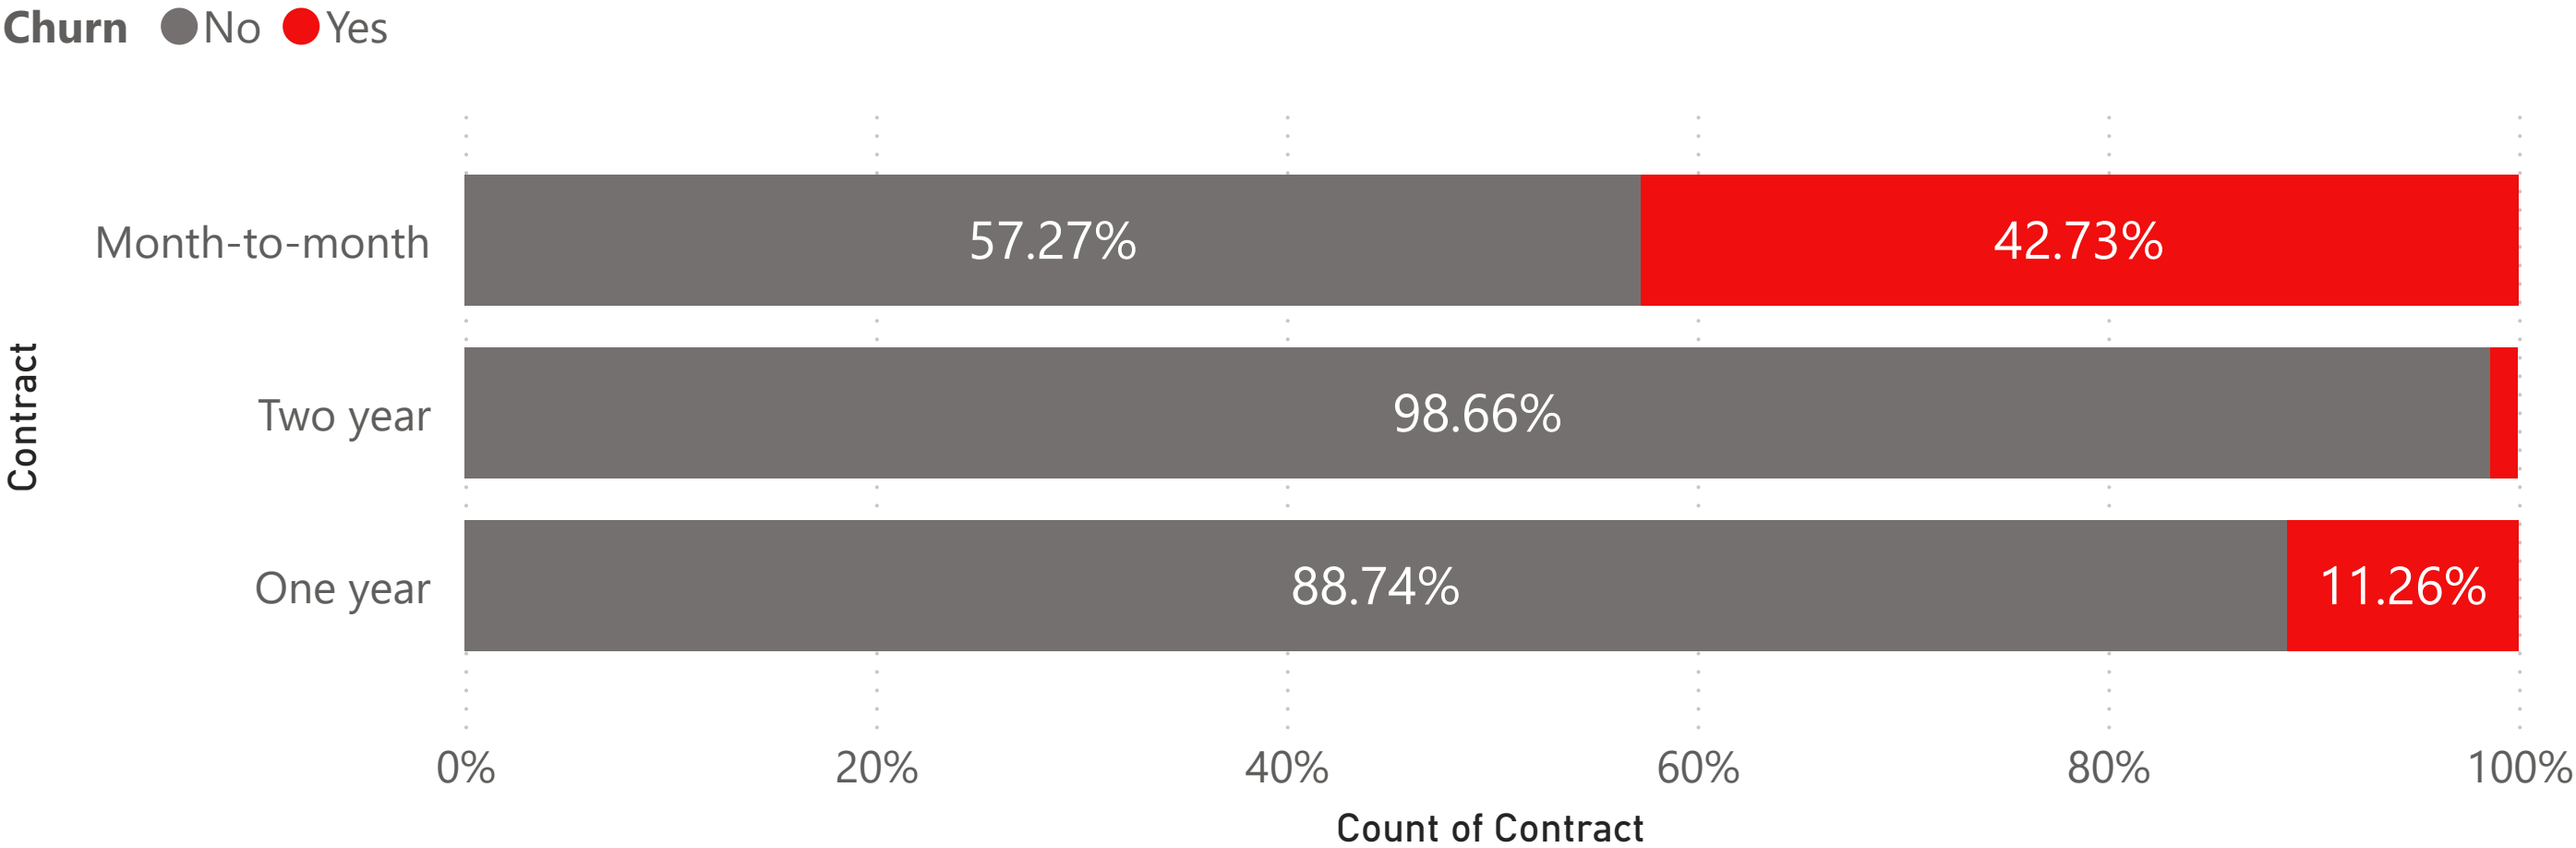

781
Churned Customers

26.02%
Churn Rate

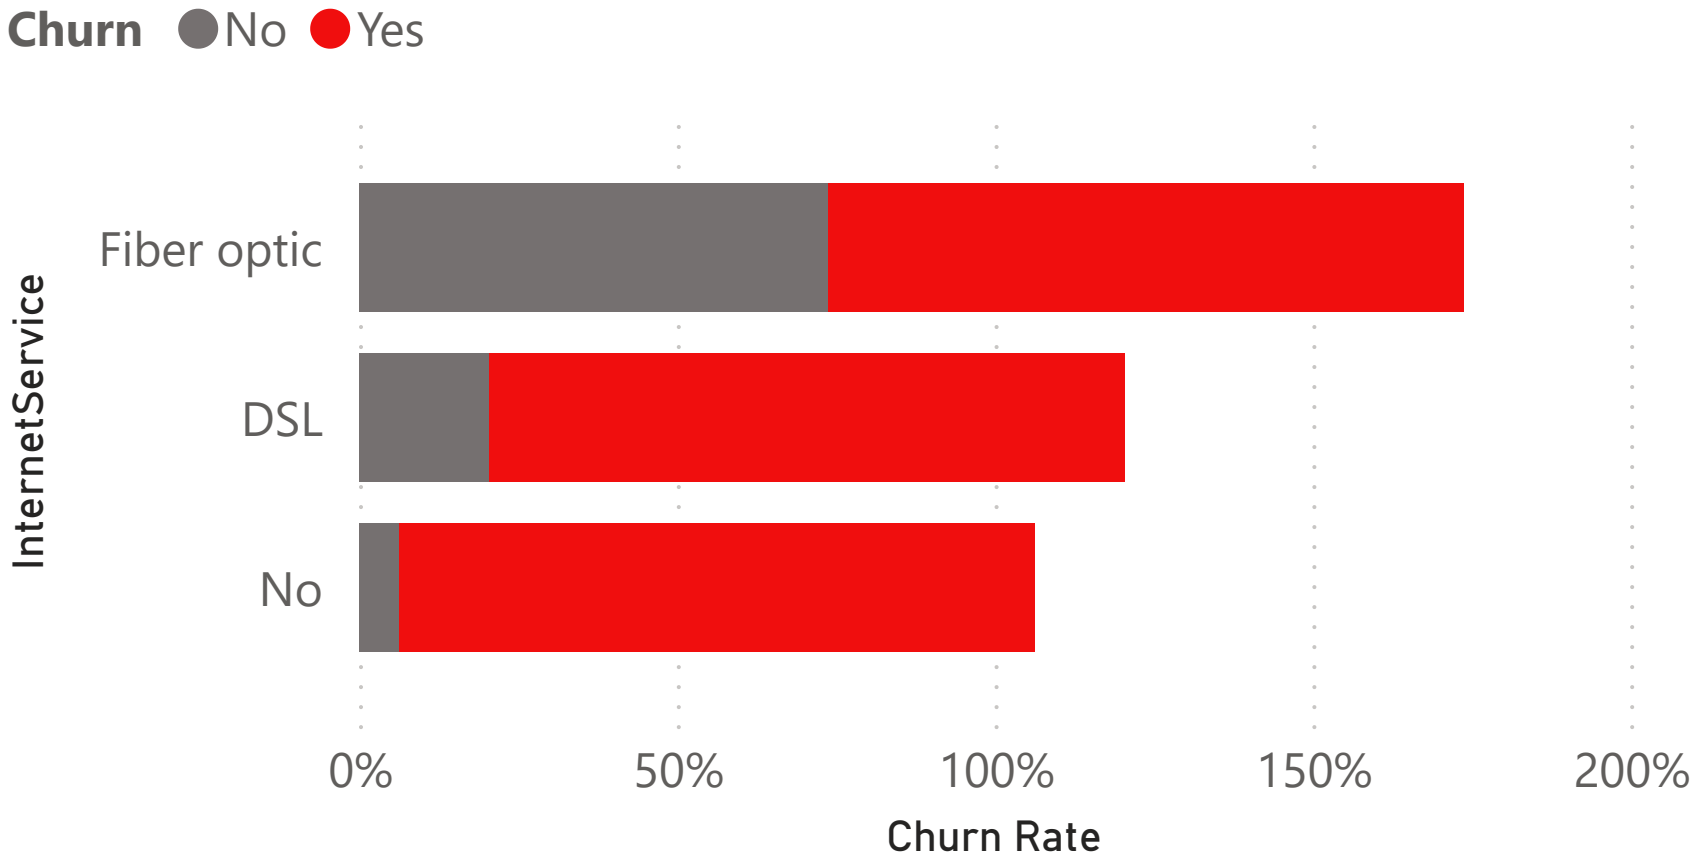

Customer distribution by Churn

Churn by Contract Type

Churn by Internet Service

Customers with month-to-month contracts have higher churn compared to long term contracts, showing lack of commitment as a key driver.

Contract

☒ Select all

☒ Month-to-month

☒ One year

☒ Two year

370

High Risk Customers

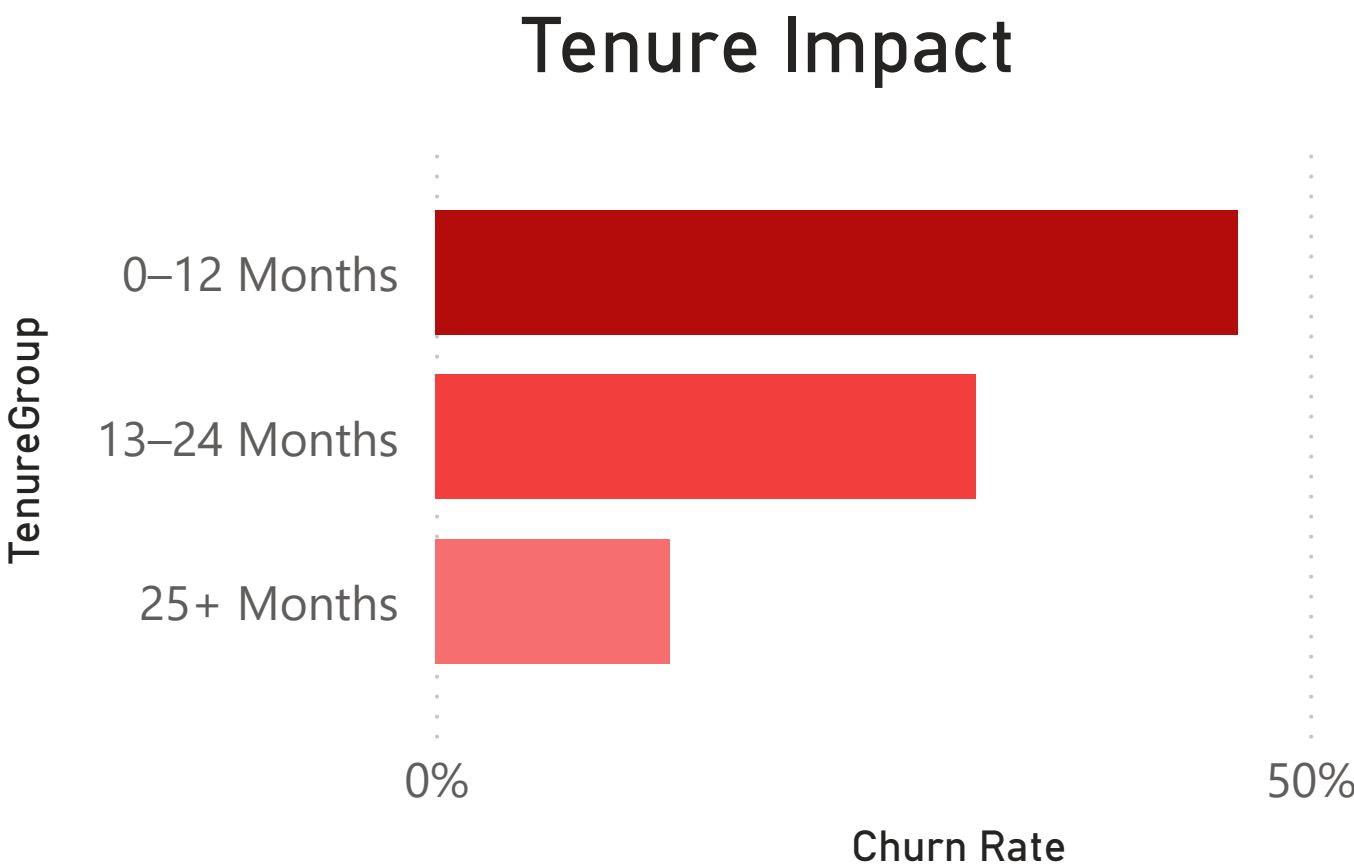

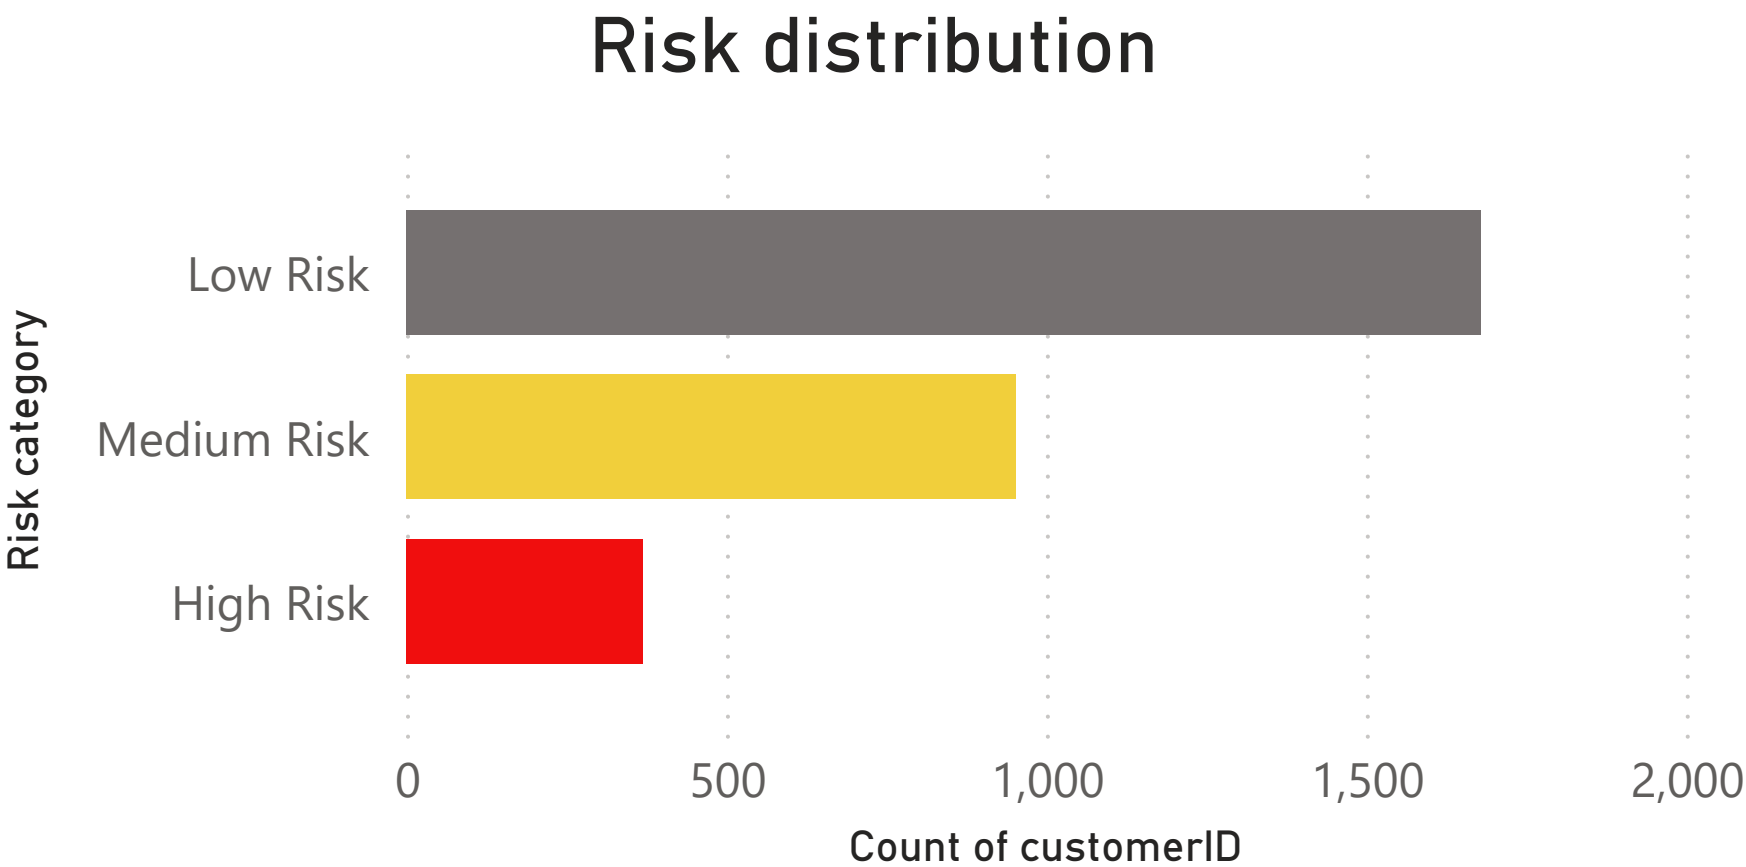

952

Medium Risk Customers

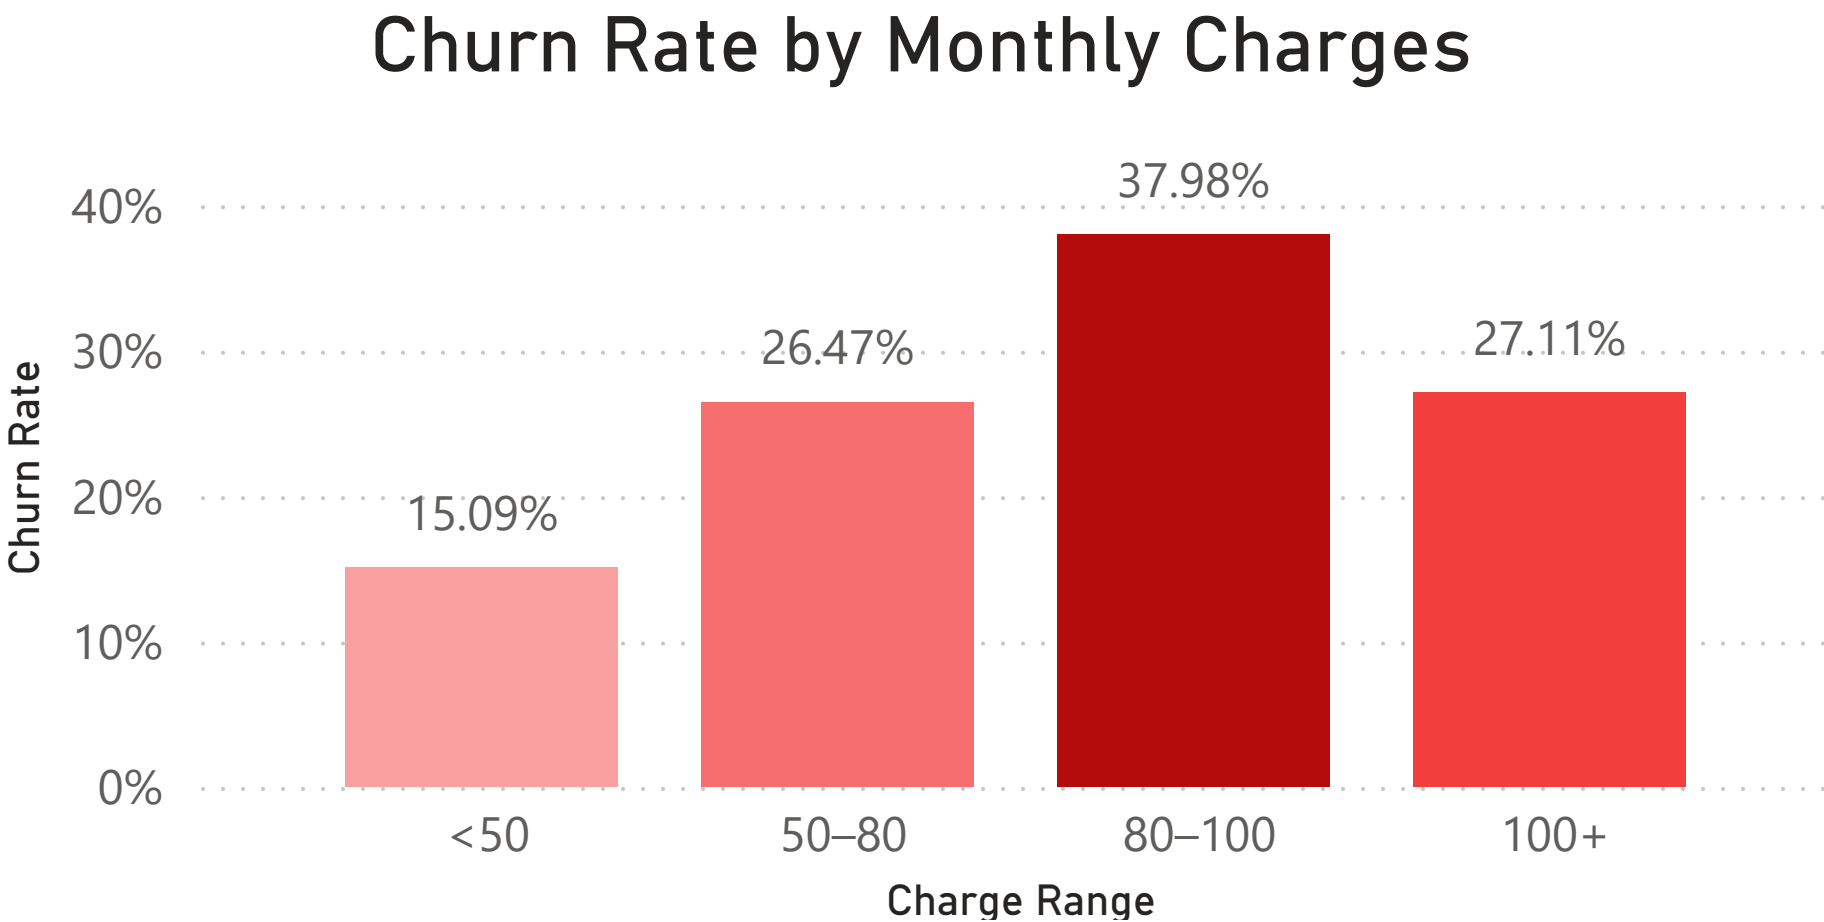

1680

Low Risk Customers

[ Risk Segmentation based on tenure, contract type, and monthly charges ]

| High-Risk Table |        |                |                |               |
|-----------------|--------|----------------|----------------|---------------|
| customerID      | Tenure | MonthlyCharges | Contract       | Risk category |
| 0021-IKXGC      | 1      | 72.10          | Month-to-month | High Risk     |
| 0094-OIFMO      | 11     | 95.00          | Month-to-month | High Risk     |
| 0107-YHINA      | 1      | 99.75          | Month-to-month | High Risk     |
| 0122-OAHPZ      | 7      | 73.85          | Month-to-month | High Risk     |
| 0137-OCGAB      | 1      | 80.20          | Month-to-month | High Risk     |
| 0139-IVEJG      | 2      | 90.35          | Month-to-month | High Risk     |
| Total           |        |                |                |               |

Customers with tenure <12 months and high monthly charges show the highest churn rate, indicating early dissatisfaction and pricing sensitivity.

High-risk customers are predominantly month-to-month users with low tenure (<12 months) and high monthly charges

Insights & Recommendations

Insights

- 1. Highest churn can be seen in Month to Month contracts
- 2. New customers (<12 months) are high risk
- 3. Users who pay high monthly charges are most likely to churn

Recommendations

- 1. Encourage long term contracts through contract based incentives, bundled & loyalty plans
- 2. Improve early-stage on boarding with relationship-driven engagement
- 3. Use targeted offers for high-paying customers
- 4. Build customer loyalty through retention programs

Focusing on new and high-paying customers can significantly reduce churn.